[April 16, 2024] - The Atherton Arts Foundation proudly announces its Earth Day Art Exhibit April 21, 2024, featuring a diverse array of works by acclaimed artists dedicated to addressing pressing environmental issues and hands-on interactive arts exhibits and demonstrations for all ages. Dorothy Hunter of the Atherton Arts foundation said “This event is a celebration of creativity and advocacy, showcasing the power of art to inspire action and awareness. “

Among the featured artists is Amber Smith, a multimedia artist renowned for her poignant exploration of endangered aspects of our world. Smith's work delves into critical issues such as animal welfare, mental health, climate change, and ecosystems. Utilizing recycled and repurposed materials, Smith's creations serve as a powerful protest society's excessive waste production.

Liz Broekhuysse is committed to envisioning a more sustainable, fair, and joyful future. Broekhuysse's work focuses on reimagining discarded textiles into new fashions and art objects, highlighting the material value of textiles and celebrating their beauty and utility.

Jim Caldwell's landscapes and portraits of trees are a celebration and homage to the beauty of our peninsula and the land we need to protect.

Artist Jerry Barrack has traveled throughout the world and photographed people, festivals, Nature, landscapes, and cityscapes. He is equally fascinated by people and their creations and the beauty and destruction that they cause. His passion is to make images that illustrate the many aspects of both the human condition and of Nature.

In addition to these featured artists, the exhibit will also include works by talented felting artists, botanical artists, paints and inks made from natural materials and art made from recycled materials. Come paint a rock.

Earth Day Art Exhibit will showcase environmentally themed works from the students of Sacred Heart High School, providing a platform for the voices and visions of the next generation of artists and activists.

As part of the exhibit, there will also be a local art competition, inviting artists from the community to submit their own environmentally conscious creations for consideration.

The Earth Day Art Exhibit promises to be a thought-provoking and inspiring experience, inviting visitors to engage with art as a catalyst for positive change. Join us in honoring Earth Day and exploring the intersection of creativity and environmental stewardship.
